

Terms of Use & Legal Notice

Terms governing use of the RSA.Irish educational trainer, including educational disclaimers, intellectual-property rules, voluntary donations and limitations of liability.

Effective: 21 August 2026 Contact: Freersa.Irish@gmail.com

Brand clarification: RSA.Irish uses “RSA” as an acronym for Rural Speed Ambition. It does not stand for the Road Safety Authority. RSA.Irish is an independent educational project and is not an official Road Safety Authority, TheoryTest.ie or government service. Nothing on this page removes rights that cannot lawfully be waived.

1. About RSA.Irish and acceptance

RSA.Irish (Rural Speed Ambition) is an independent educational project operated by Stanyslav Metlushko and designed to help learners prepare for the Irish Driver Theory Test and learn road-related English. In the project name, “RSA” means Rural Speed Ambition and is not a reference to the Road Safety Authority. RSA.Irish is not the Road Safety Authority (RSA), Prometric, TheoryTest.ie, the Department of Transport, or any government body, and is not endorsed, sponsored or approved by them unless expressly stated in writing by the relevant organisation.

By creating an account where registration is available, or by actively accepting these Terms and continuing to use the service, you agree to these Terms of Use and the Privacy Policy, version 2026-08-21.4. If you do not agree, do not use the service.

These Terms form an electronic agreement. The service may record the version and date/time of acceptance for registered accounts.

2. Educational purpose; no guarantee

The service is provided for education, practice and language learning only. Practice questions, explanations, translations, scores, readiness indicators and mock exams are not official examination questions and are not a substitute for current official rules, legislation, RSA guidance or the official Driver Theory Test service.

Road rules, speed limits, procedures, signs, examination content and official guidance can change. RSA.Irish aims to maintain accurate material but does not warrant that every item is complete, current or error-free. Users should verify important or safety-critical information against current official sources before relying on it.

No score, progress percentage, streak, mock-exam result or other indicator guarantees that a user will pass an official examination, obtain a licence, drive safely or meet any legal requirement.

3. Safety and reliance disclaimer

Do not use the service while driving or in any situation where distraction may create danger. The service is not a navigation system, emergency service, legal advice, professional driving instruction or substitute for qualified instruction.

You remain responsible for your own driving decisions, compliance with law and checking current road signs and conditions. In any conflict between RSA.Irish content and applicable law, an official road sign, a Garda direction, an authorised traffic controller, or current official guidance, the applicable law or official direction prevails.

4. User accounts and acceptable use

When you create an account, you must provide information that is accurate enough for account administration and security. You are responsible for protecting your login credentials and for activity under your account unless caused by a security failure attributable to the service operator.

You must not misuse the service, attempt unauthorised access, interfere with security or availability, scrape or bulk-extract protected content contrary to law or these Terms, impersonate another person, upload unlawful material, or use the service to infringe intellectual-property or other rights.

Accounts may be suspended, frozen, blocked or deleted where reasonably necessary for security, abuse prevention, legal compliance, protection of other users or operation of the service. Where applicable law requires notice or a remedy, those rights are preserved.

5. Intellectual property and third-party rights

Original RSA.Irish software code, original interface design, original explanatory text, original training-question wording, selection and arrangement of original material, and original brand assets are protected to the extent provided by applicable intellectual-property law. Copyright protection in Ireland generally arises automatically on creation of original works.

RSA.Irish does not claim ownership of third-party trademarks, official legislation, official government publications, official road signs or other material owned by third parties. Any such material remains subject to the rights, licences and terms of its respective owner or source.

Rules of the Road book and in-app translation. The “Rules of the Road” is the official publication of the Road Safety Authority (RSA) and is published free of charge on the RSA’s official website. All rights in it belong to the RSA and/or the State. RSA.Irish does not own it, does not sell it and claims no rights in it. Where the reader shows the book, the file is obtained from the official RSA source and is displayed to the user for personal, educational reading only, through an on-screen viewer with an optional on-demand translation aid. Any translation shown is produced automatically by a third-party machine-translation service, is unofficial and may be incomplete or inaccurate; the official English and Irish (Gaeilge) text published by the RSA is the only authoritative version and prevails over any translation, excerpt or summary shown here. If the RSA or another rights holder asks for the material to be removed or its display changed, it will be removed or restricted promptly following a request to Freersa.Irish@gmail.com.

The names RSA, Road Safety Authority, TheoryTest.ie, Prometric and related marks belong to their respective owners. References are descriptive and do not imply affiliation. If a rights holder reasonably believes material has been used improperly, contact Freersa.Irish@gmail.com with enough information to identify the material and claimed right.

6. Donations and project support

Support payments made through the external Monobank link are voluntary contributions intended to support operation and improvement of the free project. A contribution is not a fee for access, does not purchase examination success or special treatment, and does not create a right to specific features or continued availability.

Payment processing is performed by the external payment provider. RSA.Irish does not receive or store card credentials through the website. Payment-provider terms and privacy practices apply to the payment transaction. Any mandatory rights under applicable law remain unaffected.

7. Availability, changes and termination

The service may be changed, corrected, updated, suspended or discontinued. Features may be added or removed and content may be revised to reflect new rules, technical changes or quality review. Where a change materially affects registered users' contractual or privacy rights, appropriate notice or renewed consent will be sought where required by law.

We do not promise uninterrupted availability, permanent storage of progress, compatibility with every device, or that third-party links and services will remain available.

8. Limitation of liability

To the maximum extent permitted by applicable law, RSA.Irish and its operator, Stanyslav Metlushko, are not liable for indirect, incidental, special or consequential loss arising from use of, inability to use, or reliance on the service, including loss resulting from inaccurate or outdated educational content, third-party services, interrupted availability or loss of locally stored progress.

Nothing in these Terms excludes or limits liability, remedies or consumer rights that cannot lawfully be excluded or limited. Any clause that would otherwise conflict with mandatory Irish or EU law is to be read down to the minimum extent necessary to comply with that law.

The service is currently offered without a mandatory access fee. Voluntary donations are not treated as payment for a promised examination result or guaranteed service level.

9. Privacy and data protection

RSA.Irish applies the Privacy Policy published with these Terms. Where personal data is collected, users must be given transparent information about the controller, purposes, legal bases, categories of data, recipients, retention, transfers and data-subject rights as applicable under GDPR and Irish data-protection law.

The trainer stores local learning progress and legal-gate state in localStorage on the user's device. Registered accounts use Supabase authentication and may process name, email, mobile number, language preference, account status, learning progress, mock-exam history, consent records, security logs and related account metadata for the purposes described in the Privacy Policy. Contact emails are processed through the user's email provider and the project mailbox.

10. Governing law and disputes

These Terms are governed by the laws of Ireland, subject to any mandatory rights or jurisdiction protections available to consumers under Irish or EU law. Nothing in these Terms deprives a consumer of protections that cannot be waived by contract.

Before bringing a formal claim, users are encouraged to contact Freersa.Irish@gmail.com with a clear description of the issue so that it can be investigated and, where appropriate, corrected.

11. Severability and entire terms

If any provision is held invalid or unenforceable, the remaining provisions continue in effect and the affected provision is limited or replaced only to the extent necessary to make it lawful. Failure to enforce a provision on one occasion does not waive it.

These Terms, the Privacy Policy, the Copyright/IP Notice and any clearly incorporated notices form the applicable legal terms for the service, subject always to mandatory law.

Privacy Policy

How RSA.Irish processes learner account data, local learning progress, support correspondence and security records.

Effective: 21 August 2026 Contact: Freersa.Irish@gmail.com

Brand clarification: RSA.Irish uses “RSA” as an acronym for Rural Speed Ambition. It does not stand for the Road Safety Authority. RSA.Irish is an independent educational project and is not an official Road Safety Authority, TheoryTest.ie or government service. Nothing on this page removes rights that cannot lawfully be waived.

1. Who controls the data

Data Controller: Stanyslav Metlushko, operator of the RSA.Irish independent educational project.
Data-protection and legal contact: Freersa.Irish@gmail.com. RSA.Irish is a project name and does not replace the Controller’s legal identity. If the service is later transferred to a company or other legal entity, this Privacy Policy will be updated before that entity becomes the controller.

2. What the current trainer stores

The learner application stores practice progress, mistakes, settings and local legal-gate state in browser localStorage on the user’s device. When a learner creates or uses an account, the service also processes the registered-account data described below through Supabase authentication and the project database. Learning statistics may be synchronised to the registered account when the user is authenticated.

If you email the project, the project processes the information in your message and associated email metadata in order to respond and keep necessary correspondence records. If you use the Monobank support link, the payment is handled on Monobank’s external service under its own privacy terms.

3. Data processed for registered accounts

Registered account data includes or may include first name, email address, mobile phone number, preferred language, verification/account status, login and activity timestamps, planned test date, learning progress, mock-exam history, bookmarks/mistakes, consent timestamps and legal-policy version, and security/audit information.

4. Purposes and legal bases

Account administration and requested educational service: processing necessary to provide requested account functionality and service.

Security, abuse prevention, audit and service integrity: legitimate interests in protecting users and the service, balanced against user rights.

Legal compliance and handling rights requests: compliance with applicable legal obligations.

Optional communications or analytics, if introduced: a separate lawful basis and consent mechanism will be used where required. The current build does not include advertising cookies or third-party analytics.

5. Recipients and processors

Hosting, database and authentication providers such as Vercel and Supabase process data on behalf of the project subject to their contracts and applicable data-protection requirements. Gmail/Google processes project email. Monobank processes payment-support transactions when the user leaves the site for the external payment page.

The project does not sell personal data. Data may be disclosed where required by law or reasonably necessary to establish, exercise or defend legal claims.

Rules of the Road reader. When the reader displays the Rules of the Road, the book file is obtained from the Road Safety Authority's official website; the book remains the RSA's publication and RSA.Irish only displays it. If you use the optional in-reader translation, the text of the page you are viewing is sent to a third-party machine-translation provider so it can return the translation shown to you. This happens only when you request a translation and is used only to produce that translation; the reading and translation features do not require an account.

6. International transfers

Some processors may handle data outside Ireland or the EEA. Where GDPR requires safeguards, appropriate transfer mechanisms must be used by the relevant controller/processor.

7. Retention

Local learning progress stays on the device until the user resets progress, clears browser storage, or removes site data.

Registered profile and learning records are kept while the account is active. After a verified deletion request, deletion or anonymisation is scheduled within 30 days, except for narrowly necessary legal, fraud-prevention, security, or dispute records.

Administrative/security audit records are normally retained for 12 months. Support and legal correspondence may be retained for up to 24 months after the matter is closed. Payment-card credentials are not received by RSA.Irish; the external payment provider applies its own retention rules.

These periods are reviewed at least annually and whenever the service's purposes or processors materially change.

8. Security

RSA.Irish uses reasonable technical and organisational measures for account and admin data, including managed authentication, email verification, restricted database access and multi-factor authentication for administrative access. No internet system is absolutely secure. Do not send passwords or sensitive payment credentials by email.

9. Changes

Material changes to this Privacy Policy will be dated and, where required, brought to registered users' attention. New processing incompatible with the existing legal basis will not be silently introduced.

Copyright & IP Notice

Ownership, third-party rights and the process for reporting a copyright or intellectual-property concern.

Effective: 21 August 2026 Contact: Freersa.Irish@gmail.com

Brand clarification: RSA.Irish uses “RSA” as an acronym for Rural Speed Ambition. It does not stand for the Road Safety Authority. RSA.Irish is an independent educational project and is not an official Road Safety Authority, TheoryTest.ie or government service. Nothing on this page removes rights that cannot lawfully be waived.

Copyright & IP Notice

Original RSA.Irish code, original design components, original explanatory text and original training-question wording created by or assigned to the project operator, Stanyslav Metlushko, are protected to the extent recognised by law. Irish copyright generally arises automatically upon creation of an original work.

Official legislation, government/RSA publications, road-sign standards, third-party trademarks, photographs, source illustrations and other third-party materials remain the property of their respective rights holders and are not claimed as original RSA.Irish property.

In the RSA.Irish brand, “RSA” means Rural Speed Ambition. References to the Road Safety Authority, TheoryTest.ie, Prometric or other third-party names are used only to identify relevant organisations or sources and should not be read as endorsement or affiliation. RSA.Irish is an independent educational project.

If you are a rights holder and believe identified material infringes your rights, contact Freersa.Irish@gmail.com with: identification of the work/right, location of the material, your contact details, and a good-faith explanation of the issue. The project will review substantiated notices and may remove, replace or restrict material while the issue is investigated.

Users may not reproduce or redistribute substantial parts of original RSA.Irish question-bank wording, interface assets or source code except where permitted by an applicable licence, these Terms or law. Mandatory statutory exceptions remain unaffected.

Rules of the Road book & translations

The “Rules of the Road” is the official publication of the Road Safety Authority (RSA) of Ireland. All copyright and other rights in that publication — its text, images, road-sign artwork and layout — belong to the RSA and/or the State. RSA.Irish does not own the Rules of the Road, claims no rights in it, and does not sell it.

The RSA publishes the Rules of the Road free of charge on its official website. Where the RSA.Irish reader displays the book, the file is obtained from the official RSA source and remains the RSA’s publication. RSA.Irish provides only an on-screen viewer and an optional, on-demand translation aid, so that a user can read the official material for their own personal, educational use. RSA.Irish does not present the book as its own work and does not alter the official text.

Translations shown in the reader are generated automatically by a third-party machine-translation service. They are unofficial, provided only as a reading aid, and may be incomplete or inaccurate. The official English and Irish (Gaeilge) text published by the RSA is the only authoritative version and prevails over any translation, excerpt or summary shown in the reader.

If the RSA or another rights holder believes this material should be removed or its display changed, contact Freersa.Irish@gmail.com and it will be removed or restricted promptly.